Probably the most successful change in teeth health is the introduction of fluoride. Toothpaste manufacturers began putting fluoride in toothpaste in the 1960s. But, more significantly, some public health agencies began to put fluoride in the water supply, which made a number of people very unhappy because they were worried that it might be dangerous to health. However, the use of fluoride in water began to show very good results. For example, in the US, there was a 50% reduction of dental cavities in adolescents and young adults during the 1970s and 1980s. Other new treatments have also helped reduce the incidence of adolescent tooth decay and older people’s teeth are also improving. In 1962, for example, over 35% of 60-year-olds in the US had no teeth, whereas in 1985 only 15% of this same age group had no teeth. All this has allowed dentists to spend more time on other aspects of oral health and disease, as well as cosmetic dentistry, such as teeth whitening.

35. It can be understood from the passage that the introduction of fluoride ----.
   A) has become a milestone in dental health
   B) increased the profits of toothpaste manufacturers significantly
   C) wasn’t welcomed in the 1960s, when it was started to put in toothpastes
   D) attracted millions of people all over the world
   E) made some public health agencies to believe that putting fluoride in the water might be useful

36. One point made in the passage is that contrary to general belief that fluoride might be hazardous, ----.
   A) it didn’t have any side effects on humans
   B) it helped reduce dental cavities during the 1970s and 1980s all over the continent
   C) it was completely useful for the old since older people’s teeth improved a lot
   D) it showed remarkable improvement in teeth health when it was added in water
   E) no clear evidence was gathered against that idea

37. It can be inferred in the passage that after dental health improved in society, ----.
   A) dentists started to focus on cosmetic dentistry
   B) no more funds were spent on teeth health in the USA
   C) public health agencies stopped putting fluoride in the water supply
   D) dentists spent all their time on oral health of their patients
   E) dentists spent more time on cavities rather than overall health of the mouth

38. It is clearly stated in the passage that apart from fluoride, ----.
   A) other new treatments gave pace to reduce tooth decay and improvement of teeth
   B) toothpaste use also decreased the number of cavities
   C) teeth whitening might prove useful to improve oral health
   D) treatments for oral diseases developed greatly
   E) dentists never gave up finding a true conclusion
39. According to the information given in the passage, vihuela ----.
   A) is known to have had the same shape as the modern guitar
   B) is the ancestor of the modern guitar
   C) was very popular only among the middle class citizens
   D) is a guitarlike instrument that existed in the 16th century
   E) was an instrument which became popular in Europe in the 17th century

40. It can be inferred from the passage that the guitar ----.
   A) was different from its modern look before the 18th century
   B) has had a lot of changes in its appearance in the middle ages
   C) wasn’t still popular in the 16th and 17th century Europe
   D) had its greatest change in the body in the Middle Ages
   E) has always had a broadened body and a thinned belly

41. The electric guitar, as it is clear from the passage, ----.
   A) has mainly been improved to use in pop music
   B) cannot be played if it isn’t amplified and manipulated electronically
   C) became famous when Les Paul used it in his concerts
   D) has a unique sound with its different types of strings
   E) has become popular in the US although it was first manufactured in Europe

42. It can be understood from the passage that in classical music, the guitar ----.
   A) might not be so popular if it hadn’t been for Francisco Tarrega and Andrés Segovia
   B) was used largely in concerts
   C) became famous only after 1940s
   D) has always been the most important instrument in live performances
   E) was developed by Les Paul

Guitarlike instruments have existed since ancient times, but the first written mention of the guitar proper is from the 14th century. The guitar probably originated in Spain, where by the 16th century it was the counterpart among the middle and lower classes of the aristocracy’s vihuela, an instrument of similar shape and ancestry. The guitar became popular in other European countries in the 16th and 17th centuries. In the mid-18th century the guitar attained its modern form. Guitar makers in the 19th century broadened the body, increased the curve of the waist, and thinned the belly. The electric guitar, developed for popular music in the US in the 1930s, usually has a solid body. The sound of its strings is both amplified and manipulated electronically by the performer. American musician and inventor Les Paul developed prototypes for the solid-bodied electric guitar and popularized the instrument beginning in the 1940s. As an instrument of classical music, the guitar became famous largely through the efforts of the Spanish composer Francisco Tarrega and the Spanish guitar virtuoso Andrés Segovia.

Despite the latest improvements, developing influenza vaccines remains a challenge. Current vaccines do not provide 100 percent protection against influenza, and they can be quickly rendered ineffective by changes in the viruses themselves. Some scientists, believing that vaccines will never be able to completely control influenza, work to expand the number and variety of drugs available to treat the disease once symptoms appear. Until a cure for influenza is discovered, public health officials hope that identifying and reporting new viral strains quickly will result in timely actions that prevent the recurrence of deadly pandemics. Even in best-case scenarios, however, influenza is expected to remain a formidable opponent of human health.

43. According to the passage, although there have been developments, ****.
   A) scientists haven’t been able to find a cure against influenza
   B) there are some legal restrictions on the production of the influenza vaccines
   C) doctors aren’t able to prescribe a medication against influenza
   D) it is still difficult to develop effective flu vaccines
   E) patients cannot overcome influenza easily

44. One can understand from the passage that influenza viruses ****.
   A) may not be helpful because of the biological changes of people
   B) will never provide protection
   C) are to be examined in laboratories since they are constantly changing in shape
   D) are able to modify
   E) can be completely controlled by the vaccines

45. One of the points made in the passage is that ****.
   A) public health officials are afraid of experiencing an epidemic related to flu
   B) new viral strains will be identified and cured easily in the future
   C) if necessary precautions against flu aren’t taken immediately, it will wipe out the human race
   D) a third of the human population will die because of a deadly pandemic
   E) some scientists are still trying to produce preventive medications against flu

46. As is understood from the passage that even with the most optimistic belief, ****.
   A) influenza will continue to be a terrifying threat for humans
   B) influenza will remain as the most threatening illness for people
   C) it will not be so easy to treat people catching influenza
   D) film producers will be writing more and more on influenza
   E) there will be countless of drugs to treat the disease
47. The language you learnt as a baby is called your mother tongue. Acquiring your mother tongue is a natural process. A normal child begins to use words between the ages of a year and eighteen months. Sometime between fifteen months and two years old, a baby may have a vocabulary of about fifty words. The individual words may differ but they usually fall into these categories: food, body parts, clothing, animals, toys and people. A list of words does not tell us what a baby means, however. Sometimes they widen the meaning of a word beyond its normal use. Within a few months, the child will begin to put two or three words together. At this stage, his speech sounds like the language used in telegrams, which only contain the most important words needed to express the message. The child will begin to speak in sentences between the ages of two-and-a-half and four years. As he does this, he will discover the rules of the language.

48. As it is stated in the passage learning is a natural process, and, ----.
   A) an average child is not likely to utter a word before he is one year old
   B) there are a lot of words to memorize until the baby reaches at the age of 2
   C) a child must begin to speak in sentences before he is 4
   D) the rules of the language will always remain problematic for a baby
   E) parents can speed it up by talking to their child quite frequently

49. One can understand from the passage that when a baby is nearly 2 years old ----.
   A) he is supposed to learn as many as 50 words
   B) they might modify the meaning of a word broadening its sense
   C) he only uses the words related to food
   D) he starts to put more three words together
   E) there are a lot of words he may need but he doesn’t use them properly

50. It is stated in the passage that acquisition of the rules of the spoken language ----.
   A) start to be learned when a baby is between the ages of two-and-a-half and four years
   B) is a lengthy process that cannot be gained until the baby is for years old
   C) is seen when a child starts formal education
   D) may be seen in most babies between the ages 2 and 3
   E) can be gathered when the baby starts to utter some words
According to a statement made by the United Nations Conference on Women in 1980, women worldwide make up one-third of the official labour force, work two-thirds of all working hours, provide 44 per cent of the world's food supply, but receive only one-tenth of the world's income and own 1 per cent of the world's property. In the developed world this picture is changing as more and more women enter the workforce, either to achieve financial independence or to increase family income. However, even in communities where women are part of the workforce, they are usually concentrated in a few industries and occupations. World-wide these include nursing, teaching, and child-care. Pay is still unequal with men's salaries despite equal pay legislation in 90 countries.

51. It is stated in the passage that in 1980 ----.
A) one-third of the employees all over the world were women
B) women were producing all the food
C) a lot of women joined a conference held by the United Nations
D) women earned most as they supplied two-thirds of all working hours
E) people never knew how their working conditions would change in the future

52. One can understand from the passage that in developed countries, women ----.
A) have to work much less than they do now
B) have a varying outlook on family life
C) would like to gain her own monetary independence
D) are having more and more financial problems these days
E) have a fluctuating income when compared with the men

53. As is pointed out in the passage, when women work, ----.
A) they have very few rules to follow
B) they prefer nursing initially
C) there are a great number of jobs they could choose ranging from teaching to nursing
D) they have no other choice but to cooperate with men
E) they share the same privileges with men

54. It can be concluded from the passage that although there are legal arrangements, ----.
A) only very few countries obey them as to distributing salaries equally to men and women
B) women have suffered a lot to reach the same amount of salary as men do
C) women still work more than men in every part of the world
D) there is no balance in women's salaries which differ from region to region
E) men's income have always been higher than women's all over the world
